Columbus City Attorney Zach Klein Announces Latest in Series of Free Community Legal Clinics

City Attorney's office, Nationwide, and Central Community House partnering in clinic covering 'The Law, Money, and You'

COLUMBUS—On Wednesday, April 24, 2019, Columbus City Attorney Zach Klein will kick-off his office's latest community legal clinic in partnership with Nationwide and Central Community House. Following a community dinner, the clinic, entitled The Law, Money, and You, will feature a short presentation and professional advice about how to recognize a scam and protect oneself from theft. After the presentation, the free legal clinic will take place with lawyers who will offer advice regarding financial matters and other related topics.

"It's a priority for us to continue finding ways for the City Attorney's office to serve our community," said Columbus City Attorney Zach Klein. "I want to thank Nationwide and Central Community House for partnering with us in this new clinic, and look forward to the opportunity to share helpful legal and financial advice with community members."

The community legal clinics feature rotating topics and partnering law firms, corporations, and community organizations. City Attorney Klein will open the event with brief remarks.
